“Analyze an Issue” Task

Body Paragraph

It is easy to understand that the leaders are chosen mainly by the demands of the voters, at least in the political realm, instead of by other factors like reverence, familiarity, or fanaticism. Surely, these other factors could account for certain circumstances, but deep down in these constituents' hearts, they care more about their own interests. Take Franklin Roosevelt as an example. He was the only president who has served four terms as the president of the United States. How did he manage that? Was it just because of his personal charisma or his eloquence as a speaker? Or was it because he had won the sympathy from the American civilians? Clearly, he gained the trust from the constituents for what he had done to help them survive the Great Depression, and these people believed that he would continue to do something that would help improve their living conditions. “Analyze an Argument” Task

Issue No. 26.2

The following appeared in a memo from the mayor of Brindleburg to the city council.

"Two years ago, the town of Seaside Vista opened a new municipal golf course and resort hotel. Since then, the Seaside Vista Tourism Board has reported a 20% increase in visitors. In addition, local banks reported a steep rise in the number of new business loan applications they received this year. The amount of tax money collected by Seaside Vista has also increased, allowing the town to announce plans to improve Seaside Vista's roads and bridges. We recommend building a similar golf course and resort hotel in Brindleburg. We predict that this project will generate additional tax revenue that the city can use to fund much-needed public improvements." Q3

“Analyze an Issue” Task

Body Paragraph

To evaluate the mayor's recommendation, the first question to be addressed would be whether it is the golf course and resort hotel that has been attracting visitors to Seaside Vista. [question] If we were to learn that the success of Seaside Vista has actually been due to other unique, attractive characteristics of the town (e.g. the beautiful scenery and the geographical proximity to sea), then the mayor's recommendation would probably not have its intended result. In fact, other factors such as infrastructure, safety, and climate of the town might also determine whether tourists would find the new golf course and resort hotel in Seaside Vista appealing. [why and alternative explanations] If the mayor cannot rule out these factors, then he would be depending on a misleading if not wrong measure to revitalize the economy of Brindleburg. [summary] (131)
